ABOUT FLYING,
ST. LOUIS
AND THE BABY
CHICK
CONVENTION

A couple weeks ago the International Baby Chick Association held its annual convention in St. Louis and the House of Davisson being members in good standing decided to attend as per usual.

As in other years, we drove our car to Omaha, grabbed a Mid-Continent Airlines plane for Kansas City, a TWA plane from there to St. Louis. This flying business, as long as the weather is nice, is strictly far from sensational. We climbed in the plane at Omaha, started to remove our coats, looked down and we were passing over St. Joseph. Took a look at the good looking airline hostess and we were in Kansas City. Just like that.

Boarded TWA plane in Kansas City and before you could say super-spatematical, we were in St. Louis. Those of you who have never flown may wonder what it is like, but believe us, there is positively no thrill whatsoever. While flying a mile high or so, we would say to ourselves, now just supposing a motor would quit, or a wing would come off or something. Couldn't even work ourselves into a scare that way for the things seem so substantial and everything seems so commonplace that it just doesn't seem possible for anything to happen. However, were we ever to hit rough weather in one of the things, bet we would be the first to sign the no flying pledge in the future.

Fifty or sixty years ago, more or less, a Worlds Fair was held in St. Louis. Believe us when we say that since that time this city has changed but very little. Where other cities have nice new buildings, this city has the same buildings erected years ago. Their exteriors are black and grimy with smoke of ages. Where other cities are building new buildings on every corner, St. Louis has buildings standing empty. Surely a miserable run down looking place compared to other large cities we have visited lately.

In its favor, St. Louis has the finest parks, zoo and other civic enterprizes in the country. Its outdoor Civic Opera is known the world over. But other than that, you can have St. Louis and we will take Seward.

Regarding the Chick convention, will say that this was the finest we have ever attended. It had more and better exhibits, better lectures and a better place in which to stage the convention. There were over 6,000 members registred and that is a lot of people to attend any convention. We attended half a dozen lectures and picked up a few ideas which we hope will aid in our production of better chicks. We also purchased a few new items for our Hatchery which should not only enable us to save a little time, but also do a better job.

While in St. Louis, we had the pleasure of seeing the New York Yankees drop a ball game to the St. Louis Browns by the score of eight to two. It was a perfect demonstration of how a good ball team can also play poor ball. The Yankees had a half dozen fielding errors that any sand lotter would have been ashamed of. However, that is what makes a ball game. If the leading team always played in its top form they would never lose a game. It is the uncertainty and the razzing of the crowd that peeps the thing up. Would like to have been there the following Sunday and seen Ted Williams and his sluggin' Boston team play the Browns.

Well, the convention is over for this year and so is runnin' around. We have to snap into it and get a few things done. Our new hatchery building is about finished, but we have a billion other things to do before the snow flies.

While sewer and road improvements take place in our corner of Seward, we will always be open with our regular hours.
